Schools to get new technology upgrades

Molly Tippen
Staff Writer

The Romulus School District secured more than $1 million in purchasing power this week with the approval of a new technology program.

The E-rate agreement will allow the district to purchase computers, peripherals, software and other equipment that will streamline business for both employees and students, said Superintendent of Schools Carl Weiss.

"E-Rate will give us the opportunity to purchase equipment using a government discount," he said. "It will give us an opportunity to gain $1 million in purchases for a lot less."

The E-rate is a private-public program designed to spur technology access at schools and libraries. The program was originally created for higher education entities, but has rapidly regenerated as the need for technology increases in the K-12 school environment. On some equipment, discounts of up to 70 percent will be available, according to district estimates.

The contract approved by the district allows expenditures of up to $450,000. The equipment purchased under the plan will be used in classrooms and district offices, Weiss said.

Technology – as it related to school budgets and unpredictable funding scenarios – has been a concern for the district, especially as computer and the Internet have been integrated into education.

Weiss said that although the district has invested in upgrades, keeping up with equipment and software needs has been a non-stop problem. Weiss said that the cost of licenses, repair and upkeep are almost insurmountable for the district.

"If we didn't have this agreement, there would be no way for us to make the kinds of upgrades we're making," he said.

The upgrades will make doing business easier for students as well. Students will be able to log into a network set up by the district for quick access to information used in their studies, Weiss said.

Board president Ken Meinkiewicz said he believes the upgrades will help students.

"There's so much of an emphasis on computers these days," he said. "The discount program will help us get what we need."

The login process for students in all grades will likely change because an entirely new network will be in place.

Planning for the new computers and other items is already under way, and most of the work will be ongoing by the time school ends this spring.

Weiss said he believes the work will be entirely completed by the start of the new school year in September. He does acknowledge that installing equipment can be unpredictable, however.

"We're going to work hard this summer in the hopes that will happen," he said.

Trimester system is OK'd

Molly Tippen
Staff Writer

Members of the Romulus Schools Board of Education approved a plan to convert the high school class schedule from a conventional semester system to one of trimesters.

The vote – which capped several weeks of research by the administration and questions from board members – will allow the district to implement the program in time for the school year that begins this September, said Superintendent of Schools Carl Weiss, who praised the board for acting quickly on the proposal.

"We have a few things we still need to do to make sure that students that are already in the semester system can easily move over to the trimesters," he said. "Classes have to be organized so that students can meet their requirements – it's going to be an adjustment, like anything else."

New graduation requirements implemented by the state this year prompted Romulus school officials to look into trimesters, which have already been implemented at several area districts.

Carving out a win

Justin Kuderik, a student at Romulus High School, received top honors for his ice carving abilities last week at the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular. Kuderik, who has taken part in the show for two years, carved a 150-pound block of ice into a mother fish swimming with her baby. This year, carvers from about 15 schools competed in the event. Here, Kuderik (left) is shown with sculpture assistant Ashley Sweet. Both students received recognition Monday at the Romulus School Board meeting.

Food bank re-opens at local church

Molly Tippen
Staff Writer

After a three-month hiatus, Community United Methodist Church food bank is slated to re-open Feb. 12.

Shirley Hurt, the organizer of the food bank, said that after a period of re-tooling policies and procedures, the food bank will be prepared to help people who have fallen on hard times in an often difficult local economy.

"We didn't really close, but we're ready to open to more clients," she said. "We know there's a need out in the community for food and other basics."

Community United Methodist Church – one of the largest congregations in Romulus – has operated a food bank for about a year. Hurt said the pantry has typically served a consistent group of residents, and would like to open up services for others.

"We're going to take care of people on case-by-case basis," she said.

Words of wisdom

Martin Luther King III brings father's message to community

Andrea King
Staff Writer

Martin Luther King III's words against prejudice, war and school violence and support for human rights rang out last weekend at Belleville High School.

For the students, parents and community of the Van Buren Public School District, it couldn't have come at a more opportune time.

"When we see kids bring guns to school," said King. "You have to wonder who's raising those kids."

"If we had taken just one half of what we spent on the war in Iraq ($500 billion)," added King, during the Unity and Educational Program, "we could have restored public education to the world class system that it once was. We could have wiped out homelessness in America, but instead we have watched while so many of our young men and women die overseas."

Thousands attended the first-ever unity event, hosted by the school district, the Belleville Area Chamber of Commerce, the POWER Centre Church International and the Wayne County Community College District. Officials said it was hard not to leave the event with a positive feeling.

"Having Mr. King participate in our first diversity event was a great honor for us," said Pete Lazaroff, superintendent of the Van Buren Public Schools. "He set the tone and high water mark that we will aim to match at future diversity events."

Lazaroff said the community is changing rapidly with subdivisions sprouting up on what was farmland and along with growth comes diversity of people in all shapes, sizes, colors and religions.

"I had a chance to talk with parents, students and teachers after the event and all of them have been inspired by Mr. King's message," Lazaroff said. "This has been a positive event for our community and we are proud to sponsor it along with the college, the chamber and the many parent-teacher organizations within the Van Buren Public Schools."

Other speakers included Patrick McNally, president at the western campus of the Wayne County Community College, Apostle Rifa Johnson of the POWER Church and Matthew Ward, a senior at Belleville High School.

"As students, we learn many things about Martin Luther King

Martin Luther King III brought a message of tolerance, peace and support for human rights to the Wayne County Community College District western campus in Belleville last week.

King made himself accessible to students who attended the Unity and Educational Program last week and answered their questions.

Jr.: his struggle as a human rights activist, his dynamic presence as a speaker and motivator; his iconic dream of freedom and equality for everyone and his untimely death," said Ward. "Unfortunately, many times this important man and the events that surround him get memorized as just more facts in a long string a student must know for graduation. "(Today) we have a chance to touch history as his son addresses us," Ward added. "He (King III) has taken the torch lit by his father and continued the quest for equality and justice for all people. His messages and initiatives are all rooted within the tenets of nonviolent conflict resolution."

Artistic diversity

Becca Lewis, Americorps VISTA for the Romulus Community Schools, recently recognized three Cory Elementary students as winners in the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. poster contest. Posters were judged at the school and district level and winners were selected based on connections to Dr. King's message, creativity, and artistic ability. Each of the three winners received a gift card for the AMC Theaters. Pictured below (left to right) are Becca Lewis, along with Cory students Ashleigh Bennett, Dalontay Cleveland, and Bianca Buckley.

Classes - Repeats, electives will now be more feasible

ments require more general course work in core subjects like math, English, and science, little time was left for electives or career training, which comprise a great deal of a student's overall preparation for college, or the job market, said Ken Meinkiewicz, the president of the Romulus School Board.

"(The new requirements) affected students in our career training significantly," he said. "We know that each child is not going to go to college – that's just the way it is. We have to be able to train them to get a job in culinary arts, or in aircraft repair, so they can go out into the marketplace and find work"

Concerns were also raised about limited opportunities for students to repeat required courses they failed during the school year.

Trimesters mean classes will change three times during the school year. Most students will carry a course load of about five classes versus six, and class sessions will be longer to make sure the amount of material covered by instructors is not compromised, according to the district plan.

In the past year, several districts have either implemented trimesters or resolved to devise a plan to do so for the 2008-09 school year. The districts of Garden City, Westwood, Dearborn 7, Trenton and Lincoln Park implemented trimesters this year. District officials and employees at the high school began researching trimesters last year.

During the last year, district officials formed a committee comprised of members of the central office staff and educators at the high school to determine if trimesters would work at Romulus High. Informational meetings for staff members took place so they understood the impact trimesters would have on their work, said Weiss.

Board members unanimously approved the new plan after learning more about it from high school principal Dan Hurst, who led the research team and presented his findings to the board two weeks ago.

Food - Unemployment increases need for help at pantry

Several situations have led Romulus residents to seek the services of a food bank. Hurt said most are residents who have had difficulty obtaining employment, people who have obtained employment after a long period without a job, and disabled or elderly people who are on a fixed income, and cannot afford to purchase food, Hurt said.

The food bank is essentially set up like a grocery store, so that residents can pick up the types of food they need – within certain pre-determined limits – and take it with them, Hurt said.

"We didn't want to get into telling people what they should eat," she said.

The food bank, with only a few exceptions, will be open specifically to Romulus residents. The exceptions would typically be considered extreme, Hurt said.

"We will evaluate that as we go," she said. "We did have a woman who came here from Florida to get away from an abusive husband, and we gave her food. It's hard to turn people away.

"We also had a woman who didn't live here, and who was burned out of her home, and we helped her," Hurt added.

The food that the church gives away is provided by the congregation, which Hurt said is committed to feeding the hungry in the city.

"We have a box set up for canned goods at the church, and we accept monetary donations," she said. "The membership is good about giving us donations."

Hunger is a difficult and increasing problem in Michigan. The Food Security Institute at Brandies University indicated that slightly more than 8 percent of households in Michigan are described as "insecure."

The food pantry is located at the church, 11160 Olive St. It will be open from 10 a.m. until noon on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month.

The church does accept donations from outside the congregation.

To make a donation, or to find out more about the bank, call the church at (734) 941-0736.

Schools open up football to 7th grade

Molly Tippen

Seventh grade students at Romulus Middle School may have a chance to crack helmets with only members of their own grade.

Members of the Romulus School Board voted last night to table a decision on introducing seventh grade football at the middle school. Currently, the school has a seventh and eighth grade combination team.

"We were concerned about students getting an opportunity to compete in the program," said Superintendent of Schools Carl Weiss.

"Right now, the seventh graders have to compete for a spot on the team with the eighth graders. This way, more students will be able to participate in sports."

We were concerned about students getting an opportunity to compete in the program.

Carl Weiss

The school is considering introducing a new team at the urging of Mark Woodson, who indicated he wanted to add an additional team to the administration several months ago, Weiss said.

Woodson was told he could do so if he could come up for a plan to purchase equipment and pay costs for the team, which would amount to about $2,500. Woodson apparently already raised the money.

The decision to table the measure was made because of financial uncertainty at the district.

"We should consider tabling this until about February, or when we a better handle understanding of the budget," said Board Trustee Tom Kuderik.

Board President Ken Miekiewicz said he believes the district should as act soon as possible, however.

"We shouldn't wait too long because we need to know if there are (Michigan Athletic Association) league requirements we need to meet," he said.

The district will begin talks on the 2008-2009 budget within the next few months.

Appearances do count

Wayne City Council members heard a proposal Monday night for a major renovation at the Wayne Community Center.

The $1.5 million investment would update many features at the 30-year-old building and provide for a more efficient use of space. It's a response to developing trends in the fitness field and will make the facility much more friendly to handicapped users.

Those are just some of the reasons it's a good idea.

We understand that this is a difficult economic time. We understand that it will ultimately represent additional expenditures from the general fund. We still think it's important to keep the facility competitive with surrounding recreation centers. We think it's important enough, in fact, for the council to include the alternative proposals in with the initial plan. Those include an estimated $143,000 to develop a new control desk and more open lobby heading into the Recreation and Exercise Club (REC) area of the community center and an additional $91,000 for a new electronic message sign out front.

The electronic message sign might sound like a frivolous expense, but it's not. The existing sign is from the original building, too, and it's the first impression many people get of the community center. It doesn't matter how many improvements are made inside the facility if people aren't interested enough to go inside.

When added into the overall project cost, they're a negligible amount, considering that the project will be financed through municipal bonds that the city will repay for 20 years. It's a relatively small additional investment that will bring about much greater returns.

For years, Wayne has been at the forefront of providing recreational amenities to residents. The park system, community center, ice rink and aquatic center—not to mention the department itself—is among the best in Wayne County. The bond payments may stretch the general fund budget—and for that reason we hope the improvements don't require additional staffing—but proper planning can alleviate that strain. We think this is an important project, worthy of all the bells and whistles. Wayne residents deserve no less.

Talk about perfect timing

At a time when the Van Buren School District is dealing with a rash of teen violence, Martin Luther King III brought his message of peace and understanding to the community.

That's good timing, if we've ever heard it.

King visited the Wayne County Community College District western campus in Belleville and made himself available to students there. The event was hosted by the Van Buren School District in conjunction with the Belleville Area Chamber of Commerce, the POWER Centre Church International and the Wayne County Community College District.

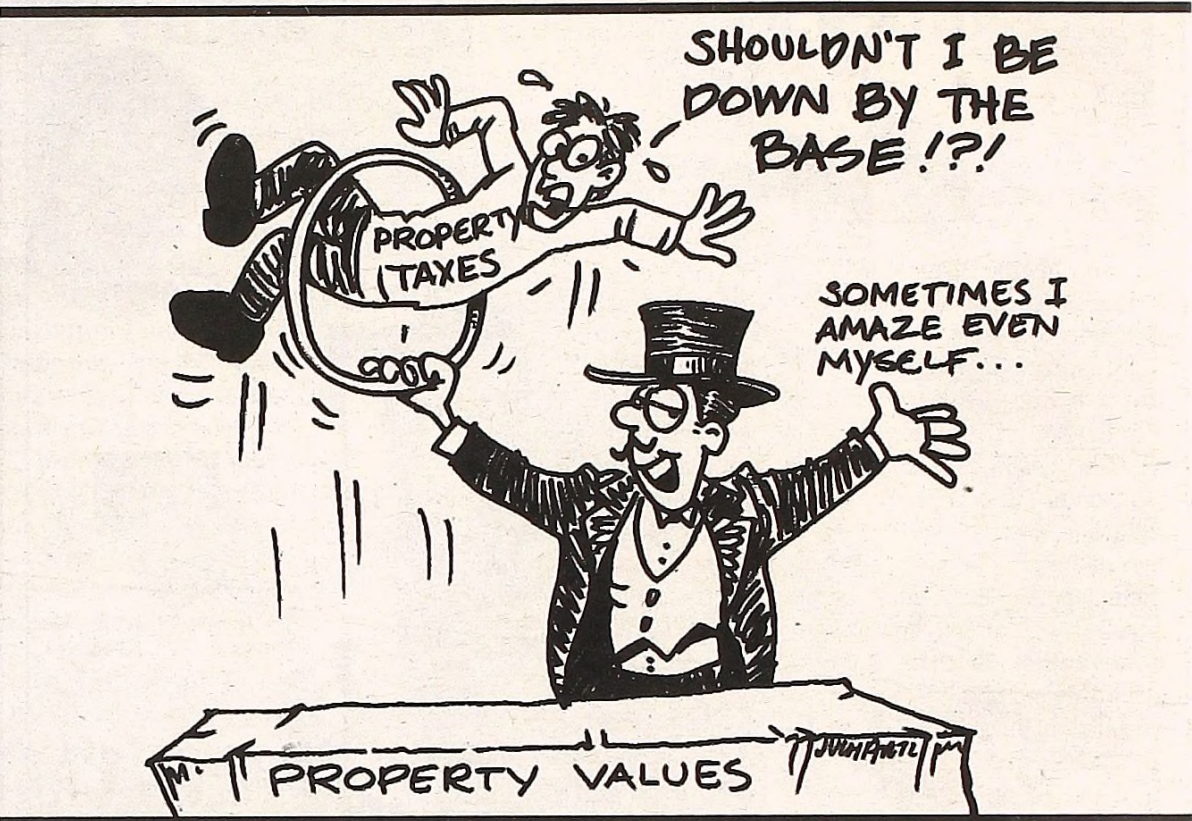

School Superintendent Pete Lazaroff called it a powerful, positive event, and something the district hopes to build on in the future.

"He set the tone and high water mark that we will aim to match at future diversity events," he said.

We hope that is indeed the case. King's message of nonviolent conflict resolution could come in particularly handy in a few weeks, when a parent group hosts an anti-gang forum in response to violent acts that have taken place at the high school. Those acts caused the cancellation of spirit week activities and ultimately caused a member of the school board to transfer his daughter from the district high school.

These actions will only get in the way of the overall educational atmosphere at the school, negatively impact the entire student body and make the upcoming school bond a tough sell for district officials.

The parents are taking the right approach in this; it's only through proactive actions. District officials can only do so much. This type of battle must begin at home.

Downtown improvements pay off

Wayne City Manager John Zech has been fielding phone calls recently about the city's position on Community Living Services.

The firm owns and operates out of the old Metro Place Mall, a prominent building within the downtown area.

Zech's response, he said, has been emphatic: "It's the same as it always was," he said. "We want them to stay!"

The discussion came up again last week during a goal-setting session for the Wayne City Council, when Zech pointed out that the company was the largest employer in the downtown area and had brought several spin-off businesses to town—not to mention the employees and clients that patronized downtown restaurants.

Coupled with the fact that the company pays more than $120,000 in taxes, the question should be: why wouldn't anyone want them to stay?

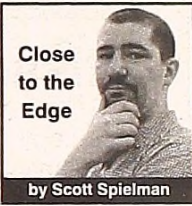

This, I believe, was lost in the translation of a few recent stories about downtown development and perhaps a column or two I've written within the past month or so.

The building has come up during conversation about downtown redevelopment. The property owned by CLS Holdings is about 6 acres, with prime frontage along west-bound Michigan Avenue and Elizabeth Street. The Wayne 20/20 Committee identified the purchase and redevelopment of the property as a way to spark revitalization in the downtown area and, nearly two years ago, the Andrews University Study pointed out the old mall as a hindrance to redevelopment just because of the way it looked.

For the record, though, nobody suggested the company should leave or was in any way unwelcome in the community. They provide a valuable service to residents throughout Wayne County and, lately, in other states as well. The company itself is a success story. My point had been that the land is underdeveloped and the building isn't exactly the most attractive structure in town. I had talked about ways to fix it up without displacing any workers.

They are now in the midst of a four-phase renovation project that will include façade improvements,

Still a long way to go, baby

We're not as progressive as we'd like to think, in Michigan or anywhere else.

Women have entered the man's world in droves during the past 30 years, and that includes elected politics.

But when it comes to how women are treated in the arena, there's quite a bit of growth that needs to occur.

In Michigan, this is especially true. We have a female chief executive, Gov. Jennifer Granholm. Also, presidential candidate and former first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton recently won the state of Michigan Democratic primary, even though it was largely symbolic.

But the commentary about both women, especially on the local Internet blogs, seems to focus less on the politics of the day and more on the women themselves. In fact, it seems to come right out of the 1960s.

There seems to be a palatable resentment among the electorate of the women that is not based on their actual skills or accomplishments. Both are referred to often by their first names, sometimes even a nickname that they don't use, like "Jenny."

It may not seem like much, but it's a mark of disrespect that's not reserved for male politicians. John Engler, the paunchy, balding, middle-aged former Michigan governor, was never called "Johnny" by anyone—even those who disagreed with his politics.

There seems to be an unnatural fascination with Rodham Clinton's hairstyle, and also with Granholm's beauty mark. Even fellow Democratic candidate John Edwards once made a pointed remark about one of the New York senator's jackets.

For both women, their records and experience is, as with any public figure, up for debate.

But that debate should not marginalize the women simply because they are women.

IT TAKES TWO, BABY: We don't cover the City of Detroit at this newspaper, but it was impossible to avoid the news of Mayor Kwame Kilpatrick's recent and largely self-made troubles during the past week.

What strikes me the most about the embarrassing episode is that at least one of the media outlets officially called for the resignation of Mayoral Chief of Staff Christine Beatty before they called on Kilpatrick to resign.

When I commented in the newsroom after the text-message scandal broke that Kilpatrick's apparent antics were ill-advised, a colleague told me that "he wasn't text-messaging himself, you know."

My fellow reporter is absolutely right. It is clear that both Kilpatrick and Beatty are equally responsible for this costly and distracting mess. Beatty, however, has been forced by public pressure to resign.

Why isn't the mayor under the same pressure?

Chenille Sisters concert will aid Van Buren schools

Andrea King
Staff Writer

The Chenille Sisters will soon bring their mix of music and humor to Belleville.

Organized as a fundraiser by the Van Buren Public Schools Education Foundation, the Chenille Sisters of Ann Arbor will perform at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 29 at Belleville High School. The members of the foundation hope to generate about $5,000 from the event, which will go directly toward students and staff of the district, according to Randy Brown, vice-president of the group.

"Funds will go right to teachers as they fill out grant request forms," he said. "We do this two times per year during the fall and spring."

The goal of the education foundation is to promote partnerships, technology and a center for community learning. The needs of the teachers to enhance the curriculum dictate what the group funds, Brown said.

Bill Wolters, secretary and acting treasurer for the foundation, said so far the group has been well received.

"We've done well for ourselves," he said. "We're privateers trying to help. Basically, we want to do something different with our fundraisers."

The Chenille Sisters were chosen for their appeal to a wide audience and to draw people from other communities into Belleville to experience area restaurants and businesses, Brown said.

"It will be a casual evening where people can laugh and have fun," Wolters said. "It certainly wasn't what I expected when I saw their show."

Tickets for VIP seating are $40 and regular seating is $20. The event will include refreshments during the intermission. All proceeds will support the Van Buren Public Schools Education Foundation.

"We're doing OK with donations, but we could always use more," Brown said.

Tickets are available through the Belleville Area Chamber of Commerce. For more information, call (734) 697-7151.

new entrances and additional landscaping, an investment worth about $1.5 million. Those welcome improvements, by the way, were probably much more practical than my ideas.

The question remains, though, of how to bring some additional development downtown. The outlots on the property remain a possibility, but I still keep coming back to the Historic Wayne Theater. The city council will vote the developer that comes up with the best plan for the land. This is a concept that would market itself; I can even frame up the picture, with a developer handing Mayor Al Haidous a crisp dollar bill, the conceptual drawing for some spiffy new development in the background.

The city would come out ahead, too. Officials would save the estimated $200,000 it will cost to tear down the structure and they will provide a steady new stream of tax revenue to the city.

The redevelopment of that site—in any form—would be a big shot in the arm for Wayne.

Rotary Club changes art auction date

Those who look forward to the annual Rotary Art Auction in March may be disappointed this year.

The annual fundraising event for the Wayne Rotary has been pushed back to April and will feature sports-related items, not art, according to Rotary Club President Art Quintal.

"We're trying to give it a different twist," he said.

The event will take place on April 25.

The Wayne Rotary Club—one of the oldest in western Wayne County—provides plenty of support to the Wayne community—and beyond. In addition to programs that supply free dictionaries to third graders, the club puts on fundraisers to pay for upgrades to its two parks within the community, provide scholarships and more.

Quintal said the group was still working on details of the April 25 event, but he likes the idea of moving away from the art auction that the organization has put on for the past three years.

"I think we've all bought as much art as we could," he said with a laugh.

Helping hands

Students Deonbre Baker, Kyra Wilson, Kevin Williams and Ciera Williams have been busy helping Tara Moffett, youth services librarian at the Fred C. Fischer Library in Belleville. They help with story time, crafts and decorations. Moffett said the students receive school credit for their work, but now they want to apply for a position at the library, as well. "That's how excited they are about the library," she said.

Driver injured in crash

An Ypsilanti woman was injured recently after she was thrown from her vehicle in a Van Buren Township accident.

At about 4:45 p.m. on Jan. 21, police and paramedics were dispatched to the area of westbound Ecorse Road near Denton Road in response to reports of a vehicle off the roadway. Officials found a Ford sedan about 30-40 feet into the tree line along westbound Ecorse Road. The driver was ejected from the driver's side window from the waist up and suffered massive traumatic injuries including a severed leg, officials said.

The vehicle had damage from the impact, which caused the engine to become separated and found about 30-40 feet away from the vehicle, according to reports.

The driver was removed after the Jaws of Life was used to take the vehicle dashboard off the patient. She was removed about 5:23 p.m. and transported to St. Joseph Mercy Trauma Center in critical condition.

The flow of traffic on Liberty Street in Belleville could change as part of the upcoming Main Street project.

Currently, Liberty Street downtown is a one-way road from Huron River Drive to Columbia Street. Once the downtown redevelopment Main Street project is in the works, the change from one lane to two may be necessary, according to officials.

"We need to think about opening South Liberty to allow traffic to come around," said Councilman George Chedraue at a recent council meeting. "We need to have a discussion on making Liberty two-way at least until Main Street is fixed."

Mayor ProTem Rick Dawson said he's definitely in favor of making Liberty Street a two-way road and leaving it that way.

"The curbing will have to be taken out, there's a telephone pole with a street light in the way and we have to consider what kind of parking there will be at Victory Park," Dawson said. "Is there enough room to have two-way traffic and parking? That's something we need to consider."

Belleville resident Kim Tindell said in theory, opening up Liberty Street might help, but overall she feels it's a bad idea.

"As often as I drive through it, I think it's a bad idea to make it a two-way because there's not enough time to re-route the roads properly," she said. "It's (Liberty) iffy now and this would cause 10 times more congestion with the Five Points intersection."

Dawson, who lives near the area, said ever since Liberty Street was made into a one-way, it's been a problem in the neighborhood.

Belleville Police Chief Gene Taylor said the reason Liberty was designated as a one-way street was a response to concerns of South Liberty residents about drivers crashing off of Savage Road, he said.

"The residents got a petition for the one-way and the parks commission took the opportunity to put in parallel parking, too," said Taylor. "There will be costs for a two-way street."

"We're not shutting down Main Street totally," he added. "For one week, I don't see us spending money to alter that street; it's an added expense. Traffic on South Liberty will be less, too, during the summertime when the schools are out so we have to take that all into account."

Dawson said officials have to do everything in their power to help people get to downtown Belleville during the construction season.

"What's the easiest way to get people downtown for business?" he said.

Taylor said people take the parallel roads now, like High Street, so they don't have to go through the Five Points intersection.

"We need to find out how much this would cost before we make any decision on this," said Councilman James Shrove.

Belleville upsets Inkster, 61-52

Jeff Novak
Staff Writer

It wasn't pretty, but the Belleville Lady Tigers beat the visiting Inkster Lady Vikings, 61-52, on Friday.

Bad calls or not, Inkster sent the Tigers to the charity stripe for 49 free throw attempts in the contest—22 of them in the fourth quarter. Four Inkster players, including seniors Victoria McGowan and Tiffany Carr, fouled out of the game in the final stanza. Belleville drained 30 of the freebies to help put the game just out of Inkster's reach.

Belleville Coach Kevin Edwards said the referees in the tough game blew their whistles frequently—but fairly.

"I thought the officials called a good game," he said. "The fans were on them, but they made the calls. Inkster played the game thinking that they could out rebound us. They would just throw it up and let their big players go get it. We started blocking out and that took that away from them."

Edwards thought his team stepped up on defense to defeat a team that beat them by 15 the last time they played back on Dec. 4,

"We've talked before the game about playing better defense," Edwards said. "I think we were a little better tonight. I told them that (Inkster) is athletic, but we can play defense—we just have to think it and play it. We could care less about offense right now. We want to get better on defense."

*"I feel game by game we are getting better,
we jumped right out."*

Belleville Coach
Kevin Edwards

Offense might not be the foremost on the Tigers' minds but it was early on in the bout with the Vikings.

Belleville raced to a 13-3 advantage in the first half before Inkster found its footing. The fouls started early on the Vikings' side. The Tigers scored 11 of their 17 first-quarter points and 14 of their 16 fourth-quarter points from the line.

Belleville finished with three players in double figures. Senior guard Kendall Acho led the team with 16. Sophomore guard DeVonyea Johnson added 12 and junior forward Niema Harvey 11.

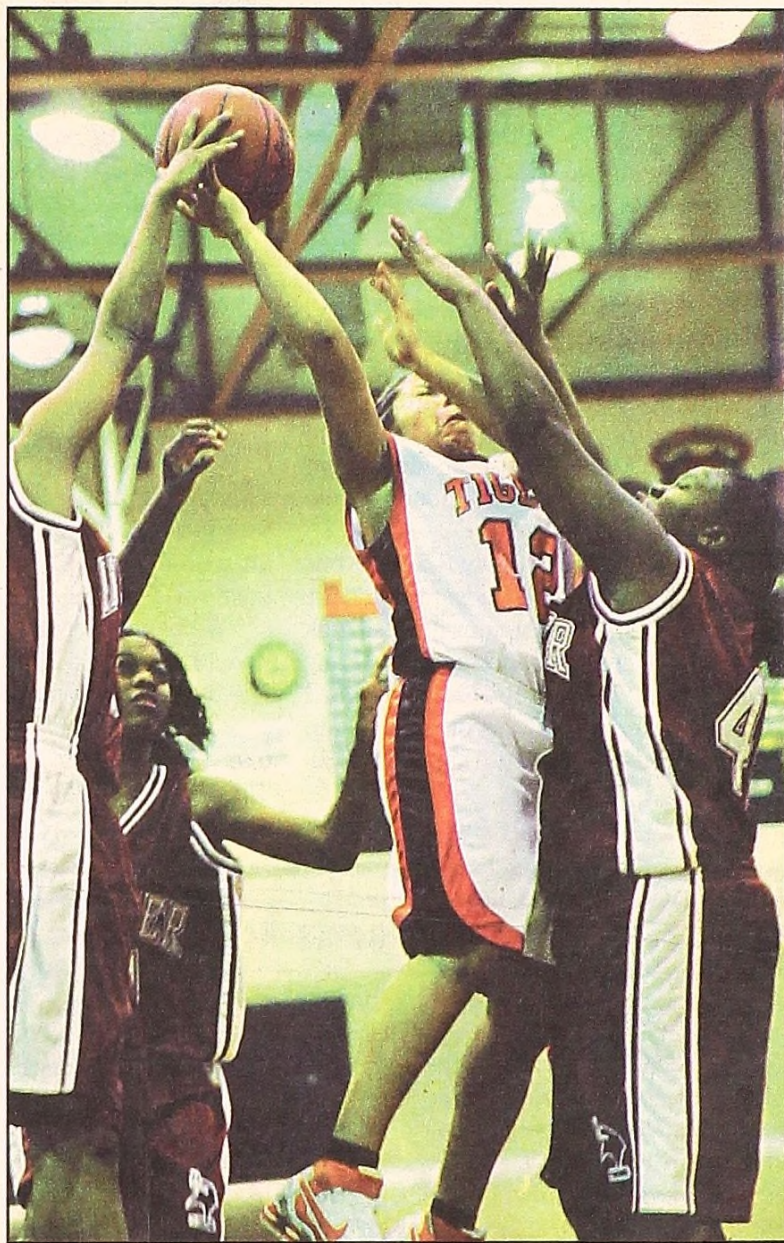

"I feel game by game we are getting better," Edwards said. "Tonight we jumped right out. Usually we wait a quarter before we get going. I think tonight, for the first time this season, I was really impressed with how we started the game out."

Belleville's trips to the line only disrupted Inkster's game plan and frustrated its players. The Lady Vikings battled back from 10- and eight-point deficits to keep it close, though.

Inkster scraped back from a 10-point hole in the first quarter and finished the frame only down three, 17-14. Inkster knotted the game at 18 early in the second, but Belleville got the momentum again and finished the first half ahead, 31-24.

In the third, Inkster was down, 42-34, but went on a 10-3 run and pulled to within one point by the time the frame was over.

Romulus' two wins earn top seat in Mega Red

Jeff Novak
Staff Writer

The Romulus Eagles varsity basketball team breezed to a 7-0 Mega Red record last week with two wins against Ypsilanti and Taylor Truman.

Neither team posed a threat to Romulus—now in sole possession of first place in the division. The Eagles were solid in both games and proved that they are one of the best teams in the area.

Visiting Truman was the latest team that fell to the wayside in Romulus' race to states. The Eagles' fast-then-slow-then-fast-again offense was good enough for the 56-38 victory on Friday.

Romulus took an early 8-2 lead but allowed Truman a 12-11 advantage at the end of the first. The Romulus defense took care of the Cougars in the second, holding them to just four points. Senior forward Will Clyburn put Romulus up by 10 when he closed out the second frame with a 30-footer.

Clyburn and senior forward Devin

Pankey led the effort with 15 points each. Clyburn snagged 17 rebounds.

"I thought we played good defensively," said Romulus Coach Nate Oats.

Romulus was an offensive force against Ypsilanti last Tuesday and beat the Braves, 71-48.

Pankey led the group with 18 points and shot 100 percent on the night. He was 8-for-8 from the field and 2-for-2 from the line.

Dominique Buckley scored 12, Mario Crawford 11, Laron Rodgers and DeAndray Buckley each had 10.

Romulus came out shooting and took a 25-5 lead after one period and added to that for a 46-16 halftime lead. Ypsilanti outscored them 32-25 in the second half but it was too little, too late for the Braves.

"We came out great," Oats said. "We had 10 baskets, with eight assists, in the first quarter so we moved the ball well."

Romulus heads to a struggling Monroe team at 7 p.m. today and hosts Oak Park at 7 p.m. on Saturday and Willow Run at 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Wayne wins Western

Jeff Novak
Staff Writer

With two division games left to play, the Wayne Zebra varsity basketball team secured the Western division crown of the Western Lakes Activities Association last week.

Wayne stayed undefeated, 8-0, in division play with wins over hosts Canton and Northville.

The stakes were high for both Wayne and Northville on Friday. Northville had the opportunity to tie for first place with a win and Wayne's perfect division record was on the line. The Mustangs did everything in their power to upset the Zebras but fell short, 56-47.

The Mustangs came out strong and outscored the Zebras in the first two quarters for a 27-19 half-time lead before Wayne caught fire in the second half.

Northville's David Burke opened the scoring with a triple off of a steal. Dan Kirkpatrick added a triple and two free throws to help the Mustangs to a 12-6 lead after one period of play.

Northville took a 15-8 lead off of a Kyle Asher triple. That warranted a timeout from Wayne's bench. After that Kirkpatrick went on a personal eight-point run, boosting Northville's lead to 22-8. Wayne finished out the frame strong with a three-point play and triple by Mike Lee, two free throws by John Hill and a basket by Jeremy Lovelady but Northville kept an eight-point lead, 27-19, at the break.

Whatever was said in the Zebras' locker room worked. The Zebras came out on a mission to stay undefeated in the division and win the crown. Wayne outscored Northville, 37-20, in the second half for the win.

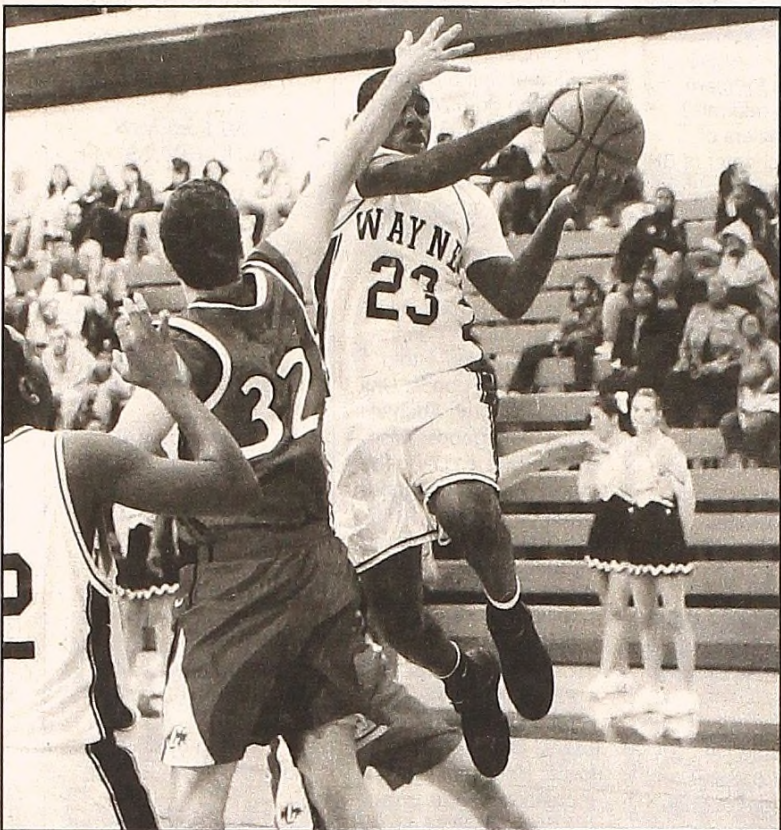

The momentum swing came in a 65 second span when Wayne hit three consecutive triples by Robert Woodson, Abney and Lee. The flurry gave the Zebras their first lead of the game, 32-29, at the 4:35 mark of the third.

The teams traded baskets through the fourth as Wayne held on for the victory.

"Northville was real deliberate and played a controlled game and had us up against the ropes," said Wayne Coach Wayne Woodard. "They made us work for everything. We didn't hit our shots in the first half, but we were able to get inside of their zone in the second half. It was a battle."

Wayne had balanced scoring. Lee led the team with 14 points. Abney added 12 and Woodson, 10.

"I thought we played well," said Northville Coach Darrel Schumacher. "We played good zone defense. We have to give Wayne credit. They are the best team in the division and their kids stepped up."

Kirkpatrick led the Mustangs' effort with 14 points. Burke added 12.

Both teams were fresh off of wins last Tuesday.

Northville knocked off Plymouth, 62-59, in the final seconds when Burke drained a triple with two seconds left on the clock.

Kirkpatrick led Northville with 18. Greg Hasse added 16.

Brandon Roberts scored 20 points for the 'Cats. Navraj Sandhu added 16.

Wayne beat Canton, 70-46, last Tuesday. John Hill scored 16 points. Woodson added 14 and Abney 13.

Neil Sharma scored 18 for Canton.

Wayne's hosts Plymouth for it's Coming Home game at 7 p.m. on Friday to finish out the regular season division play.

Northville hosts Franklin in the final division game at 7 p.m. on Friday and finishes the regular season play at Salem at 7 p.m. on Tuesday and host Glenn—the top team on the Lakes side—at 7 p.m. next Friday.

Inkster watched as four players fouled out in the fourth quarter, including leading scorer Victoria McGowan and fellow senior Tiffany Carr. McGowan, even with the early exit, led all scorers with 28 points.

To say the least, Inkster Coach Peggy Carr, who typically remains hush-hush about the officiating, wasn't pleased with the outcome.

"I don't think the girls followed the game plan," Carr said. "I think they let the refs—because they were horrible—get in their heads. Our girls kept getting frustrated because it never went our way the whole game."

"They have to learn to be mature and learn to overcome that and still play hard," she added. "We still had a chance and still could have won that game down the stretch."

Belleville is at Garden City at 7 p.m. on Friday. The Tigers host Taylor Truman at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Inkster is at Dearborn at 7 p.m. on Friday.
